Charges Hypocrisy On Congo

Most of the hute and cry over the murdering of a few whites in the Congo is nothing but pious hypocrisy. The press is an excellent example of this hypocrisy. The U. S. press has never condemned savagery per se. It has condemned savagery only when it is heaped upon whites, which shows how racist the press is. Of course these assertions will be denied, but the evidence speaks for itself.

An examination of the press on the mess in the Congo is revealing. One finds that there was no loud chorus of indignation when thousands of black Africans were butchered prior to the massacre of whites. Even today not one paper is condemning the savagery that is being practiced upon black Africans. Not one condemned the wanton wholesale butchering of thousands of black Africans, women, children, "rebels" and non-rebels, and innocent old men by the white mercenaries, the C.I.A., and the Congolese Army.

No one uttered a word of indignation over the indiscriminate killing of black Africans by the Belgian paratroopers who entered to save white hostages. No one said a word until the savagery ceased to be heaped upon blacks. But the minute the savagery began to be practiced upon whites the chorus of righteous indignation began in full force.
